Dr Christine Hemsley CPsychol

Making the decision to seek help can be a daunting and confusing one but I strive to offer a calm, non-judgemental attitude that respects our varied ways of living and dealing with problems. As an experienced Counselling Psychologist I work with individuals and couples of all ages who are finding life or relationships challenging. This may be the result of short or long term difficulties.

I also work with individuals and couples who feel that they are coping well with life but would like to learn skills to enhance their ability to cope or are interested in personal growth.

My training includes a Doctorate in Psychotherapeutic and Counselling Psychology. With this and additional training, I am able to assess the difficulty that brings a person/couple to see me and using this and the goals of therapy, work in a way that fits with the person/couple and their needs. This also means that I am able to choose both long and short term methods of working. I strive for the highest standards of care that will provide the best service for you.

Working with a wide range of difficulties, I also have special interests. My work with trauma, whether it emotional, a past history of abuse, physical injury or specific event, is supported by additional training. I am also specialised in relational difficulties.

If you would like to make an initial enquiry then please call me on 07926 943 896 or email me at drchristinehemsley@gmail.com

My service may be useful in helping individuals or couples with:

- Depression/Profound Sadness
- Postnatal Depression
- Anxiety
- OCD
- Obsessions
- Trauma
- Self Harming
- Hair Pulling/Skin Picking
- Gambling
- Bereavement and Loss
- Pain Management
- Relationships Difficulties
- Understanding Repeating Patterns of Behaviour
- Improving Quality of Life

I am a Chartered Psychologist with the British Psychological Society and registered member of the Health Professions Council.
